Roles of MBA (Law) Professionals

In House Counsel:

- These attorneys assist large businesses with the management of their legal affairs. They are also responsible for developing legal policies that guide the business operations of the company. The MBA (Law) graduate provides a large benefit since clients are business unit leaders and could ask questions about structuring deals, contracts and even approaching litigation.

Management Consultant:

- These consultants help businesses improve their performance by focusing on business strategy, structure, management and operations. The business fundamentals learnt in business school and the logical reasoning obtained in law school make MBA(Law) graduates a great choice for such roles.

Business Law

- Corporate lawyers handle complex transactional matters involving business mergers, acquisitions and corporate restructuring. They may also deal with real estate transactions, intellectual property, private equity and white collar crimes.

One Course Several Roles

- There might be an amalgamation of these roles or just a standalone portfolio. But MBA(Law) graduates are going to be trailblazers and highly sought after professionals in the changing phase of our economy and any organisation which inculcates these professionals is bound to benefit immensely.
